

You can now go for a walk in the rain without getting wet with the help of incredible 3D cameras

By Kara
O'Neill

10:19, 9 September
2015

Most people would laugh if you told them they could go for a nice soothing walk in the rain - without getting wet.

But that far-away dream (if it ever was one) is about to become a reality, thanks to this amazing new art exhibition which allows visitors to immerse themselves in falling water without getting drenched in the process.

The art installation, titled the Rain Room, uses a 3D camera tracking system that creates a carefully choreographed path through the downpour, based on the movements of visitors.

Amazing: You can now go for a walk in the rain without getting wet

Hannes Koch, the Rain Room designer told CCTV News: "I think the initially idea didn't have anything to do with rain, it had to do with imagination, of how it would feel to be inside rain but to be protected from it."

He added: "To be inside something threatening almost, but you are not exposed to it."

Technology: 3D cameras allow visitors to create their own dry pathway through the downpour

The exhibition has already been shown at the Barbican Centre in London in 2012 and the Museum of Modern Art in New York in 2013.

It is currently being displayed in the Yuz Museum in Shanghai.

Would you go for a walk through the Rain Room?

- Yes, it sounds very relaxing -
78%
- No, what's the point of going out in the rain if you're not going to get wet? -
22%